

The very last thing this country needs is a media monopoly. The dangers of this are very evident in the recent actions by clear channel communications in their censorship of the Dixie Chicks music due to negative comments of President Bush. When the media engages in censorship, we start down a slippery slope from which there is very little chance of return.